

THE STONELEIGH PROJECT: A CASE STUDY OF OUTDOOR YOUTH WORK AND ITS IMPACT ON PERSONAL AND SOCIAL TRANSFORMATION

A Thesis submitted for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy

By

Christopher Loynes

School of Sport, Leisure and Travel
Faculty of Enterprise and Innovation
Buckinghamshire New University
Brunel University

August 2008

This copy of the thesis has been supplied on condition that anyone who consults it is understood to recognise that its copyright rests with its author under the terms of the United Kingdom Copyright Acts. No quotation from the thesis and no information derived from it may be published without proper acknowledgement.

Abstract

This research is a case study of the Stoneleigh Group; a partnership of voluntary youth work organisations that piloted a spiritual development programme for young people aged 18 to 25. The purpose of the research was to examine the claims made by the Stoneleigh Group to have developed a radical approach and outcomes of personal and social transformation within a programme of informal education out of doors. The research was undertaken in the contexts of reviews of research concerning outdoor education, informal education for young people, and youth transition. An ethnographic study of the retreat programme and its impact on the lives of the young people was combined with a critical study of the advocacy work of the Stoneleigh Group within the development of the National Youth Work Curriculum. The analysis was undertaken with the aid of Bernstein's theoretical framework for curriculum and pedagogic critique. The study of the programme claims that the pedagogic approach was radical in its ideology and practice. However, it is argued that the impact on the young people depended on the ideology of the youth organisation for which they volunteered. A range of claims for a radical outcome are identified and discussed. The research argues that, despite the claim that the outcomes of social transformation were only partially achieved, the practices of the Stoneleigh Group were contested because of their perceived radicalism. The study of the advocacy work suggests that, despite these challenges, the Stoneleigh Group's contributions to the national discussions concerning the spiritual development of young people within the youth work curriculum resulted in proposals that supported a more radical pedagogic approach than currently practised. The research indicates that the Stoneleigh Group influenced statements made in the consultation. It is argued that the Group provided support for the concept of young people as agents of social change. In particular, it is suggested that the pilot was used to support a view of young people as capable of, and valued for, their challenges to the established norms of society.

Acknowledgements

I wish to thank Dick Allcock, Dr Peter Allison, Prof. Peter Becker, Steve Bowles, Janice Dolley, Stephen Doughty, Chris Dunning, Prof. Peter Higgins, Prof. Barbara Humberstone, Dr Robbie Nicol, Roger Orgill, Dr Heather Prince, Dr Kate Rawles, Kaye Richards, Soo Redshaw, Ina Stans, Letty Sudds, and Dr Takako Takano for your emotional and intellectual support during this research. You have all been valued and sensitive critical friends.

My colleagues at Adventure Education, Edinburgh University, St. Martin's College (now the University of Cumbria) and Threshold have been extraordinarily tolerant of the effect on my work of undertaking this study. My thanks go to you also.

I would especially like to thank the participants in the Stoneleigh Project for their full co-operation in this study. I wish you all well.

Sue Bennett was inspirational as a youth worker with Eden Community Outdoors. She epitomised all that motivated me to take an interest in the radical potential of this field. This thesis is dedicated to her.

Author's Declaration

This research builds on an evaluative study, The Stoneleigh Group Pilot Programme: An Evaluation, (Loynes, 2004) undertaken on behalf of the Stoneleigh Group. The research asks different questions for a different purpose and involved the collection of additional evidence and an extended period of field research. Some of the material in Chapter 5 was included as part of a book chapter, Social Reform, Militarism and Other Historical Influences on the Practice of Outdoor Education in Youth Work (Loynes, 2007).

Two conference presentations were made that explored the early findings from this research. The first was entitled 'Power With or Power Over: A Case Study of Emerging Voices Within an Outdoor Experience' and was presented at 'Widening Horizons', the Third International Conference of Outdoor Education at the University of Central Lancashire in July 2006. The second was called 'Agents of Change or Coming in from the Cold: A Case Study of Developing Narratives in an Outdoor Experience' at the 10th International Conference for Experiential Learning at Lancaster University in July 2006. Neither of these presentations was published.

The thesis is based on my own research and is all my own work. Quotes from other sources are referenced and quoted evidence is identified with a code that corresponds with the source in the evidence database.

Table of Contents

Abstract		i
Acknowledgements		ii
Author's Declaration		iii
Table of Contents		iv
List of Tables		ix
Chapter 1	Introduction	1
	The Aims of the Research	2
	Chapters 2, 3, 4 and 5: Contexts for the Research	4
	Chapters 6 and 7: The Research Approach	6
	Chapter 8: A Theoretical Framework	7
	Chapters 9, 10, 11, 12 and 13: Discussion	8
	Chapter 14: Conclusions	11
	The Multiple Roles of the Researcher	11
	The Use of Pseudonyms for the Participants	12
	Coding the Evidence	12
	Conclusion	12
Chapter 2	Introducing the Stoneleigh Group and the Stoneleigh Project	14
	The Stoneleigh Group	14
	The Young People	24
	The Stoneleigh Project	25
	The Evaluation Study	31
	Conclusion	37

Chapter 3	A Review of Outdoor Education Research	39
	Outdoor Education: Early Claims	40
	Emerging Research Findings Criticised	41
	The Meta-Studies Reviewed	41
	Recent research reviewed	44
	Locating this Study within the Wider Research on Outdoor Education	56
Chapter 4	Youth, Transition and Agency	58
	Youth in Context	59
	The Vulnerability of Youth	63
	Youth Transitions	68
	Youth Transition as Problem	74
	Youth Development	76
	Transition and Risk, Structure and Agency	79
	Conclusion	86
Chapter 5	Youth Development and Informal Education	89
	Colonisation and Tradition	89
	Historical Influences	91
	The New Individualism and Outdoor and Informal Education	110
	Conclusion	119
Chapter 6	Arriving at a Methodology	123
	Finding a Philosophical Position	123
	The Contribution of Narrative	130
	Reflexivity	133
	An Ethnographic Approach	133
	Entering the Field Co-operatively and Critically	135
	Criticality	137
	A Grounded Approach	139

	Adopting Critical, Interpretative, Hermeneutic and Ethnographic Approaches to the Case Study	139
Chapter 7	A Review of the Methods of Inquiry	142
	A Structure for the Inquiry	142
	Focus 1: An Ethnography of the Stoneleigh Project Programme	146
	Focus 2: The Impact of the Stoneleigh Project on the Young People	160
	Focus 3: A Critical Analysis of the Struggle for the Meaning and Dissemination of the Findings of the Stoneleigh Project	162
	Ethical Considerations	163
	Reflexivity	165
	Benefits and Dilemmas	166
	Conclusion	170
Chapter 8	Knowledge, Power and Control in Education: Theoretical Perspectives	172
	The Underlying Principles of Bernstein's Theories	176
	The Current Relevance of Bernstein's Ideas	180
	Bernstein's Theories and the Stoneleigh Project	184
	The Genesis of Values	195
	Conclusion	199
Chapter 9	The Ideologies of the Stoneleigh Group and its Partners	201
	Youth and Transition	204
	Marginalisation	209
	The Stoneleigh Group and the Meaning of Work	222
	Conclusion	228

Chapter 10	The Participants' Experience of the Stoneleigh Project Retreats	231
	The Retreat Programme	232
	The Young Participants	238
	The Retreat Experience	244
	Conclusion	267
Chapter 11	The Role of Narrative in the Stoneleigh Project	270
	Recruitment	271
	Creating Discourse	273
	Constructing and Reconstructing Identity	274
	Experiencing Agency	279
	Learning Narrative Skills	280
	Transformation	281
	Conclusion	283
Chapter 12	The Stoneleigh Project and its Influence on the Lives of the Young Participants after the Retreats	285
	The Stoneleigh Project Programme after the Retreats	285
	Agents of Personal Change	301
	Personal or Social Change Agents	308
	The Young People of the Stoneleigh Project as Agents of Social Change.	316
	Conclusion	320
Chapter 13	Ideological Struggles: The Spirituality Concept and Informal Education	322
	Spirituality and the Stoneleigh Group Partners	323
	An Integrated Code and the Threat to Power.	326
	The Struggle between the Programme Staff and the Stoneleigh Group Partners.	330
	Leadership as a Colonising Influence: the struggle amongst the Stoneleigh Group partners.	335
	The Struggle for Ideas after the Stoneleigh Project.	340

	Unravelling the Conflation of Values, Spirituality and Religion.	342
Chapter 14	Conclusions	346
	Questions One and Two: The Integrated Curriculum and Pedagogy of the Retreats.	346
	Question Three: Agency and the Reproduction and Transformation of Social Order.	353
	Question Four: The Struggle to Break Out of a Liberal 'Papering Over of the Cracks'.	359
	Questions for Further Study.	362
	References	364
Appendix 1	The Backgrounds to Participants in the Text.	374
Appendix 2	Sources of Evidence Used in this Thesis.	378
Appendix 3	A Personal Narrative in the Context of the Study of The Stoneleigh Project.	383
Appendix 4	A Summary of the Work of the Stoneleigh Group Partners.	393
Appendix 5	The Four Umbrellas of the Stoneleigh Group and its Network.	398

List of Diagrams and Tables

Chapter 2

Table 1 The Stoneleigh Project: Calendar of Events 22

Table 2 The Formal Roles of the Participants within the Stoneleigh Group 24

Chapter 7

Table 3 Research Calendar 143

Chapter 10

Table 4 Summary of 12 ‘Case Study’ Young Participants’ Perceived Situations Before the Stoneleigh Project 239

Chapter 12

Table 5 Summary of the Effect of the Stoneleigh Project on the Identity and Trajectory of the 12 Case Study Young People 287

Diagram 1 Trajectories of the Young Participants in the Stoneleigh Project Showing the Representative Pathways of the 12 Participants Analysed as Case Studies. 291

